To Whom it May Concern:

Last September 2008, Sandra Baker came to the Cleveland area to give four presentations in four different cities. The mayor of Seven Hills and the Ohio State Master Gardeners extension hosted a seminar where the people were lined up out the door.

Ms. Baker has been dubbed the Deer Doctor, and for good reason. Her vast knowledge and experience with protecting landscaping from foraging deer easily unlocked the perceived mysteries to this growing concern.

Those in attendance were captivated by her entertaining, uplifting and fascinating teachings. At every venue many people stood in line to ask her additional questions and to thank her for giving them the answers they had been seeking for so long.

She presented at two of our largest garden centers and each invited her to return. Ms. Baker also spoke on a very popular radio show hosted by a local celebrity and large garden center owner. Wherever we went, everyone left with a big smile.

As a result of the enormous success of her first appearance, several mayors, in the Cleveland area, recently invited her to return to conduct two more workshops. Personally, I am convinced Ms. Baker has some sort of magical qualities because she somehow manages to take a very controversial and difficult issue and solve the conflict with ease and at the same time makes everyone happy.

Sincerely,
